

TNA WRESTLING MAXIMUM IMPACT TOUR POSTPONED DUE TO PRODUCTION COMMITMENTS

Immediate Release – 3pm, Monday December 21

With great disappointment Chugg Entertainment announced today that the highly anticipated TNA Maximum Impact! Tour would be postponed until later in the year. The TNA Team stated that changes in the US TV production schedule, have made it necessary to postpone the TNA live tour debut in Australia this February. TNA apologizes to Australian wrestling fans and hopes to reschedule the dates as soon as possible.

The wrestling powerhouse has been taking the live arena by storm since jumping off the TV screen and onto centre stage. The sweat and glory of TNA has seen this sports phenomenon spread across the Northern hemisphere, making it the fastest growing sports entertainment franchise in the USA.

Their first Australian tour was set to make the same maximum impact. Chugg Entertainment accepted the opportunity to bring Australia's legion of fans a piece of the live action. Chugg Entertainment's Executive Chairman, Michael Chugg has voiced his regret:

We were very excited to be approached by TNA to put together their first tour of Australia, and are disappointed that we have had to cancel these dates due to their filming commitments. We do understand that television is where it all began for TNA and we support them in honouring their obligations. We're in discussions about a new time period and hope to have the TNA team in Australia soon.
